Polyethylene – the versatile underfloor acoustic insulant – from Novostrat

Polyethylene is an amazingly versatile product. It can be produced in many forms from paper thin to thicker than engineering blocks, at almost any density and with the widest range of laminations to alter, improve and/or create particular performance characteristics - and all have their place in Insulation in Construction, both in industry and in the home.

Novostrat is a manufacturer of high performance Polyethylene flooring underlay systems. It is the versatility of polyethylene which allows Novostrat to bring to the home underlay market a whole range of products, with different performance properties, to suit virtually every application and budget. From an 'economy' carpet underlay 'Graphite', which Novostrat insist is the most competitively priced utility carpet underlay on the market, to Sonic Gold Excel, an underlay for wood and laminate floors with the highest performance specification of 22db sound reduction, and very high impact resistance.

Because rolls of Novostrat underlays are so relatively light and easy to handle, they answer many of the H&S concerns held by installers and distributors, and because they are fully recyclable, containing no HCFCs or halogens at all, they also answer any environmental responsibility concerns often held by Local Authorities and Specifiers.

Novostrat is today the largest manufacturer of polyethylene products in Ireland, with sales and warehousing throughout UK and Continental Europe. Currently focusing on their range of underlay products, Novostrat will soon be officially launching a multi-purpose thermal insulation foil faced 'wrap' for walls and lofts, and a multi-foil roof insulation system which provides roof insulation performance exceeding all the demands of the latest Part L Building Regulations. All these systems will share the distinct benefit of ease of handling, transportation and installation.
